Dam breaks, threatens to collapse

Some evacuate as lake rips 80-foot hole in base of dam

JIM ALLEN

...ears that the dam at Lake Charleston would under to the Embarras River were renewed today when an 80-foot-wide support shifted, opening beneath the middle of the dam a gap which is growing by the hour.

Some seven families had been notified of the possibility of the entire structure collapsing; however, emergency radio transmissions and state highway workers blocking the Lake Charleston Road bridge indicated that only two families had heeded warnings.

U. Phil Eppinette of Charleston's Emergency Services and Disaster Agency said that Charleston Mayor Murray Choate had issued a voluntary evacuation order to at least seven families.

"We're on high ground," said Mary Ann Johns with her husband, Gary, were among those notified of the dam's worsening condition. The Johns live on a section of Lake Charleston Road downstream from the dam.

"I can't see us leaving, but it could be a problem as much as that we'd have to walk instead of going to get around," Johns said.

She said her son, Ronnie, and his family who live in a trailer near the old bridge on Charleston Road evacuated and are staying the night with friends in Charleston.

While water had been rushing over the top of the dam, moving four lower 76-ton cement supports to an upright position away from and parallel to the dam, the slab moved away from the dam early Monday. Then the flat "apron" behind the dam slid beneath the spillway in tact, but allowing water to flow beneath the 38-year-old structure.

Earlier Monday, city officials called the chance of the dam collapsing "remote," citing the water level's drop of 18 inches since the river reached its crest early Monday.

However, Emergency Services Coordinator Paul Cottingham said at the scene that "there was no way of knowing" whether the gap beneath the dam would expand further or if the entire dam would give.

Cottingham said he was called to the site at approximately 9:30 p.m. Monday and saw a 60 to 70-foot-wide hole on the underside of the dam. Within the next hour, he said, the gap swelled another 10 feet, allowing increasing amounts of the water to flow beneath the dam's cap.

Cottingham said there was also no way of knowing whether a cement support or the natural slate apron had given after being eroded.

Officials had been concerned that the water would flow beneath the dam after crashing against the concrete slabs loosened earlier, causing erosion of the higher row of supports directly against the dam's cap.

The dam, which extends some 300 feet southward beyond the 600 to 700 foot spillway cap, was completely closed off after city officials left the area after getting a closer look.

The higher supports were plainly visible Monday night as water ceased to flow over the cap, quickly rushing beneath it through the new hole.

Downstream from the dam, a Route 130 bridge over the Embarras remained open to traffic, but the much older bridge on Lake Charleston Road was closed and Charleston Police would only allow residents and emergency vehicles near the dam.

Eppinette said the Route 130 bridge could possibly be closed later Friday.

Should the dam give, engineers had predicted earlier that the entire lake could flow downstream, creating an initial six to eight foot wall of water.

That wall of water, engineers said earlier, would place in peril the older Lake Charleston Road bridge which only had approximately six feet in clearance remaining.

panels, seen near the upper left portion of the photo, originally extended all the way across the dam. But Thursday, several of them separated from the spillway, causing the bottom of the dam to erode.

Dense fog and a spray of rain hampered workers' ability to examine the damage Monday night. Meanwhile, still no idea of the cost of repairing the dam was available.

With the gap beneath the dam widening, chances of repair work being started before winter are now probably even more remote.

The earliest the dam could be repaired, Cottingham said Sunday, would be within three months.

The dam was constructed in 1947 and was rated "satisfactory" by the state only last year. The first signs of the dam collapsing, Cottingham said, "took us by surprise."

Until the water recedes further, Cottingham said the city will not know the extent nor the cost of repair.

This November has seen unprecedented rainfall exceeding nine inches and that rain has been cited as a reason for the dam's initial buckling.

Eastern's water, which is fed by a Charleston water plant in turn fed by Lake Charleston, will not be affected, according to Acting Plant Supervisor Richard Sherman.

City, contractors to hash out bandshell bills

JIM ALLEN
Editor

Charleston's City Council will meet in a special session Tuesday to discuss paying off bills for the controversial construction of a bandshell in city-owned Kiwanis Park.

Four contractors have said they don't know whether to turn to the city or the Kiwanis Club for $8,000 in outstanding bills for building the bandshell.

Meanwhile, Commissioner Richard Corbin hinted a compromise might be made between the city and the Kiwanis Club.

The meeting is scheduled for 5 p.m. in the Council chambers.

Directed by Charleston Mayor Murray Choate—a former Kiwanis president and current member—and City Administrator Mike Steele, work for the bandshell was ordered by then Building and Zoning Director Robert "Terry" Sharp.

Charleston Commissioners have had mixed reactions on the subject of who should pay the bills, with council members taking pro, con and neutral stands.

Kiwanis Club members have said their organization only promised $5,000 to the project, and Choate said he never intended for the city to pay for the remainder of the $13,000 total.

Choate said he only promised "in-kind" services to the construction, including city labor and supplies not to exceed $400 to $500.

But, at a meeting in May to discuss the construction and finances between Kiwanian J.W. Oglesby, City Engineer E.O. "Buddy" Reed, Steele and Choate, it had already been estimated that the "performing arts stage" would cost at least $9,500.

Commissioner Bruce Scism said he hoped all Kiwanians, contractors and city employees involved were planning to attend the meeting. However, some said they did not plan on attending.

Oglesby said Monday he planned to field the council's questions, but would not say whether he believed the city was responsible for the bills.

Sharp, who said he was directed to take over the project after initially working in cooperation with Oglesby, said he was not planning to go to the meeting. Sharp recently vacated his post with the city to head up a consulting firm, which now has a contract with the city.

Dave Shick of Best Construction—with outstanding bills of $2,550—said he also could not attend.

Max Daugherty, with $1,500 in outstanding bills from Daugherty Construction, said he might attend.

Both Daugherty and Shick, though, said they were hopeful that the council would pay the bills. Daugherty said, "It's gone on long enough. If they don't pay it, I guess we'll have to do something

Arabs suspects in car bombing

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP)—Two men believed to be carrying Moroccan passports became prime suspects Monday in the hunt for those who bombed a U.S. military shopping center, West German authorities reported.

Sunday's car bombing wounded 35 people, almost all of them U.S. civilians and servicemen. Three remained hospitalized Monday, one a serviceman who had been listed in serious condition but was upgraded to good condition Monday.

Officials have refused to release the names of the injured.

Authorities first had said the attack looked like the work of West German leftist terrorists. Later they said foreigners might have been responsible, and federal police issued a statement saying the silver-blue metallic BMW 525 sedan in which the explosives were packed had been bought Saturday by two men "apparently carrying Moroccan passports."

Authorities issued descriptions and composite pictures of the pair and asked possible witnesses to report any sightings of the men, described as being in their 30s.

"They may be Arabs," the statement said, adding that both were definitely foreigners and that only one spoke any German. One man's name appeared on his passport as "Azuz Mohsein."

Quinn seeks first political office

SPRINGFIELD, Ill (AP)—After making a career of throwing stones at the glass house of state government, Patrick Quinn wants in.

Quinn plans next week to announce his first run for statewide office, a bid for the Democratic nomination for state treasurer.

But he insists that becoming one of the elected officials he has so often criticized wouldn't change his adversarial style.

Quinn, 36, is best known as the founder and mouthpiece of the Coalition for Political Honesty, a loose-knit statewide group that gained prominence by engineering the 1980 ballot referendum that cut the size of the Illinois House by one-third.

Republican seeks Hartigan post

CHICAGO (AP)—Arlington Heights Mayor James T. Ryan today announced his candidacy for the Republican nomination for attorney general.

Speaking at a news conference, Ryan contended that Attorney General Neil F. Hartigan, a Democrat seeking re-election, has used his office to further his political career.

"I will diligently work to eliminate partisanship in the office of Illinois attorney general," Ryan said.

"The attorney general is duty-bound to protect the rights of each individual in this state," he added. "The office should not serve as a stepping stone in furthering a career ambition."

If elected, Ryan said he would be a "fighter for the consumer against fraud."

Perry heads fund-raising efforts to help 7-year-old liver patient

CHICAGO (AP)—Chicago Bears rookie William "The Refrigerator" Perry warmed hearts, gave money and caused a sensation Monday when he appeared as part of a fund-raising effort for a 7-year-old girl who needs a liver transplant.

Perry, the 302-pound defensive tackle-running back, gave $1,000 and declared himself national spokesman for the "Crystal Jenkins Life Fund for Children" as about 300 people cheered at Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center.

"I grew up with 12 people in my family," said Perry, 22, a native of Aiken, S.C. "I thank the Lord that no one in my family every needed a transplant."

"I made a promise to the good Lord that if I could get in a situation to help somebody, I'd do it."

Miss Jenkins, who is from Blackville, S.C., a few miles from Perry's hometown, suffers from biliary atresia and will die within a year if she doesn't have a liver transplant, doctors said.

U.S. Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., who represents the district including Blackville and Aiken, asked Perry to help raise the $250,000 needed for the transplant, which would be performed at the Chicago hospital.

"When we called and asked for help, he didn't hesitate one second in giving his time and money," Derrick said.

More than $110,000 has already been raised for the operation in South Carolina, Derrick said. Any extra money raised would be used to help other children at the hospital, officials said.

"I know how warm-hearted people in Chicago are," Perry said. "I will start the pledge for Crystal Jenkins by donating $1,000 for her transplant."

"I hope many more people hear me today and send their contributions in," he added.

Money should be sent to the hospital in care of the fund, Perry said.

After his presentation—attended by hundreds of hospital employees, patients and visitors—Perry toured a pediatrics ward, signing autographs and talking with ailing youngsters.

"I think it's wonderful," said Peter Schipma of Oak Forest, an adult patient.

"He's the nation's sweetheart," added nurse Patty Doolis.

Perry, accompanied by his wife Sherry, waded through a mob of autograph-seekers after the news conference before plunging into another crowd of fans in the pediatrics ward.

Miss Jenkins was accompanied by her mother, Marilyn, at the news conference.

The girl was diagnosed as suffering the liver disease when she was seven months old and has been receiving treatment in South Carolina, the hospital said.

"Her life expectancy is less than a year," without the transplant, said Dr. James Williams, director of transplantation for the hospital.

He said once the family raises the funds, the quest for a donor will begin—and may be more difficult.

Democrats push woman for ticket

CHICAGO (AP)—State Democratic slatemakers worked to unite warring factions Monday, as U.S. Sen. Alan Dixon backed a re-election bid by Treasurer James Donnewald and others suggested Donnewald run for secretary of state to make room for a woman on the ticket.

"What we're trying to do is not to affront anyone," said state Sen. Dawn Clark Netsch, who emerged as the Democratic women's choice for a spot on the statewide ticket. "What we're saying is that we're trying to save you (the party) from yourselves."

You should not go into the 1986 election without a woman candidate," said Mrs. Netsch during a second day of Democratic slatemaking at a downtown hotel.

Party leaders began the process to select candidates for one U.S. Senate seat and six statewide offices—governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, attorney general, comptroller and treasurer—last Friday in Springfield.

Mrs. Netsch said during a break in the day-long meetings of the Democratic Central Committee that she and other prominent Democratic women have suggested Donnewald be moved to break an impasse over who to slate for treasurer.

Despite his incumbency, Donnewald acknowledged while announcing his re-election bid last week that elements within the party were trying to prevent his being slated for another run.

Dixon addressed that issue earlier, when he launched his own re-election bid. At the time, he promised to keep Donnewald, an old friend and political ally, on the ticket as the party's slate candidate for state treasurer in the March 1986 primary.

Dixon reiterated his support Monday, citing Donnewald's 30-year record as a public servant.

"If a fellow never lost (an election), if a fellow beat everyone who ran against him, if he did a decent job, I want you to tell me why that party would turn its back on him," Dixon said.

Spy swap arranged

Ghanian traded for CIA agents

WASHINGTON (AP)—A cousin of Ghana's military leader has secretly pleaded no contest to spying on the United States and was swapped back to his homeland Monday in exchange for close to 10 Ghanaians "of interest to the United States," a Justice Department spokesman said.

Spokesman John Russell said Michael A. Soussoudis, 39, who has been in U.S. custody since his arrest at a suburban motel on July 10, was remanded to the custody of Ghana's ambassador to the United States, Eric Otoo, on condition that Soussoudis leave this country soon.

Soussoudis is a cousin of Lt. Jerry Rawlings, the military leader of Ghana, and had publicly denied charges that he was a spy.

But Russell said Soussoudis pleaded no contest at a closed hearing last week in U.S. District Court in nearby Alexandria, Va., to two counts under the espionage act, each of which carried a maximum 10-year penalty.

On Monday, Soussoudis was sentenced to 20 years in prison, but the sentence was reduced by U.S. District Judge Richard L. Williams to time served and he was turned over to the Ghanaian ambassador.

In return, nearly 10 Ghanaians and their families were flown to other African nations, which cooperated with the Justice Department in arranging the swap but which was not identified by name.

Russell would only say the Ghanaians were "of interest to the United States," but they were thought to have spied for the CIA.

Also on Monday, Soussoudis' co-defendant, Sharon M. Scranage, 29, a former clerk at the CIA station in Accra, Ghana was sentenced by Judge Williams to five years in prison for her role in the spy affair.

She pleaded guilty to sharing CIA secrets, including the identities of informants, with Soussoudis, who officials said had become her lover.

Government sources had said Miss Scranage had been told by the CIA while she was still in Ghana to drop her liaison with Soussoudis, but he had admitted to CIA security officers upon her reassignment here that the relationship had continued.

She was said to have cooperated in luring Soussoudis to what he thought would be a romantic engagement with her, but was instead a setup for his arrest.

The names of those allowed to leave Ghana were not immediately available.

Seven more die after commando hijacking raid

Fire races through cabin, trapping passengers in rescue attempt

VALLETTA, Malta (AP)—Egypt said today its commandos stormed a hijacked Egyptian jet to end a massacre, but fire raced through the cabin trapping passengers when terrorists threw phosphorus grenades. A total of 60 people died, a government official said.

The woman, identified as an American, was killed during the hijacking, the official said, and 59 died during the Egyptian attack Sunday night on the jet parked at Malta's airport.

The government spokesman Paul Mifsud said the dead included nine Palestinian children and four hijackers. He said one hijacker survived the attack by Egyptian commandos and was in serious condition at St. Luke's Hospital in Valletta.

First reports said all of the hijackers were dead. Mifsud said 58 bodies were recovered from the crashed-out Boeing 737. In addition, he said a young man died of injuries he suffered after Egyptian soldiers blew in two doors and surged forward to shoot it out with the hijackers.

One dead was the American woman shot by the commandos after the plane landed in Malta Saturday and thrown from the aircraft. She was identified today by the State Department in Washington as Charlett Marie Rogenkamp, 38, a civilian U.S. Air Force employee stationed in Greece.

Defense Department spokesman Cmdr. Bob

Prucha said she was from Oceanside, Calif., and was on vacation when the Athens-to-Cairo flight was hijacked Saturday and forced to Malta, a Mediterranean island.

Mifsud said the American woman was the only one killed before the rescue attempt, but that other people were shot and thrown from the plane. Before the commando assault ended the hijacking, the captain had reported the hijackers killed seven people. Apparently he had believed that all of those shot and thrown from the plane had been killed.

The two other American passengers were wounded and thrown from the plane before the assault, said U.S. Embassy deputy chief Joel Levy. Mifsud said 30 people were being treated in Malta hospitals.

The Egyptian government, in its first official reaction to the attack, said today the "terrorists threw three phosphorus grenades in the front and rear of the plane, which started large fires and spread burning shrapnel. The available resources at Valletta Airport to face this situation were limited and modest, and therefore the number of people saved were 44 passengers."

The statement said the command attack "took place successfully according to plan," and the "lightning assault" took five minutes and no passengers were hurt by commandos.

But Tony Lyons, a 46-year-old Australian hijack survivor who spoke from his hospital bed on Britain's TV-AM morning news show, said, "There was a lot of indiscriminate shooting because the Egyptian commandos didn't know who were the terrorists and who weren't."

The pilot, Capt. Hani Galal, described the hijackers as "first-class killers" and said the ringleader had singled out Americans and Israelis "for execution."

Patrick Scott Baker, a surviving American passenger, told the NBC-TV 'Today' show, "I was walked out onto a platform and then shot. It was a graze. I was confused for a second. I fell down the stairs head first. . . After about two minutes, I got up and ran away."

Gilbert Briard, a 36-year-old Frenchman injured in the raid, told Europe 1 radio in Paris the hijackers called the Americans "and tied their hands behind their backs. They first shot the boy, then waited about an hour to shoot the second person and then shot the third."

Levy said initial reports indicated all of the hijackers were killed. But the state-run Egyptian newspaper al-Ahram, without giving sources, also reported today that one of the sky pirates was wounded and recovering in a Valletta hospital.

Thanksgiving traditionally a time for feasts, thanks

JULIE LEWIS

Staff

Thanksgiving was first celebrated by newly-colonized Pilgrims as a day of gathering with friends, feasting on harvested crops and giving thanks to God.

After a winter of hardship in the Plymouth Colony, Gov. William Bradford issued a proclamation of a statewide day of giving thanks.

Today, Thanksgiving is a family day celebrated with big dinners and joyous feasts.

Roast turkey and pumpkin pie are national symbols of the festive day that falls on the fourth day in November.

It's a great time to get together with relatives and do some socializing," sophomore Mark Holloway said.

Holloway, a marketing major from Marlboro, said he thinks the break from school is long overdue.

Senior Jill Vieley said she's looking forward to some relaxation before the last push of finals arrive.

"I also want to see my dog, Mogan," Vieley said.

Sophomore marketing major Alan Thomilson said he likes Thanksgiving because he gets to eat "real, home-cooked food."

Thomilson also plans to do some rabbit hunting over the five-day break.

Holidays also appear to bring out the unique traditions.

"We always drink hot cider by the fireplace," junior Marianne Kunkel said.

Vieley said her family puts up the Christmas tree over the break and catches up on the latest gossip.

Senior Renee Kessler said her family gathers to make food from her grandma's old recipes. "My favorite is the stuffing," she said.

Thanksgiving seems to be the dieter's day of exception in the United States. It isn't uncommon to see people literally stuff themselves with turkey, potatoes, dressing and pie.

Business instructor Deborah Miseles said she likes deep dish pumpkin pie the best, but she and her husband enjoy the dressing too.

Although vacation and home-cooked food side by side seem like heaven enough, many people haven't forgotten the meaning of Thanksgiving.

"Sometimes we don't think about it as we should," said Miseles. "We forget that it is a day of giving thanks."

Junior Ben Fitch said he sees Thanksgiving as time to spend relaxing with family and realizing there really are a lot of things we can be thankful for.

Kessler added, "Thanksgiving is a time for being thankful for all the little things we take for granted in life."

Yes, Virginia, be thankful this Thanksgiving

It's that time of the year when thoughts for the extended weekend include meeting with friends and relatives and feasting until the gut swells to disgusting proportions.

And for some, this weekend marks the start of the entire holiday season.

Regardless, this week's events were designed to revolve around one thought—that we should reflect on what we have.

And yes Virginia, there are reasons to be thankful right here on Eastern's campus.

If we've looked everywhere, hopefully we have left no stone unturned, whether it's city government, student government, Eastern's administration or the classroom in general.

First, let's be thankful our gem of a representative, Joe O'Mera, hasn't said anything at the City Council meetings since his last faux pas.

We can say thanks, for the 38-year-old dam on the southeast side of Charleston held up under the pressure of water and media hawks waiting for the story and the dam to break. Well, at least until Monday night.

Or look again! We still have 11 class days to recover our grades before finals week.

The City Council hasn't looked lately to pick student pockets to balance their budget. And they haven't been able to find more streets to place "no parking" signs. For this, we say thanks.

While there was little—if any—student response, the Faculty and Student Senate addressed the divestment issue. At least someone is interested.

Because we're already in college, we should be thankful that we missed out on the new Illinois Board of Higher Education admission standards for 1990's crop of college freshmen.

You see, if you look hard enough, there's always reason to be thankful.

So from all of us at the News, enjoy the weekend and have a happy Thanksgiving break.

Your turn

Too many bicycles on too small a path

Editor:

I for one am glad to see the recent onslaught of cold weather for one basic reason. No, not to wear my new $60 winter sweater, and I don't need to be pushed into the holiday spirit.

The reason I'm so happy about winter's arrival is because with cold weather, bicycles are put up until spring.

For the past four months these two-wheeled terrorists have been zigging and zagging around pedestrians as though they were human pylons. I know I speak for many when I say I am tired of these delinquent daredevils scaring the heck out of me by zooming around me without any warning.

Let's talk possible solutions people.

How about separate bike paths like at the University of Illinois? Or making one quad sidewalk a bike side and the other for pedestrians only?

Here's something else to think about. Every class building (except the library) can be reached by taking streets, and probably a lot faster than the sidewalks.

Those of you who walk your bike on crowded sidewalks, thank you. Let's put our heads together and figure out a solution, before spring thaw. Please, pedestrians, speak

'Short' break sure to be full of tradition

After three months of grueling, treacherous labor at Eastern, most students are probably giving a sigh of relief and thanks as a five day break comes upon us.

And this sigh of thanks is most appropriate considering the mini-vacation will be focused around the most thankful of all holidays—Thanksgiving.

But before we all start jumping up and down, thus making fools of ourselves, we must reflect on the fact that Thanksgiving is probably one of the most sickening holidays known to man.

While I like a nice turkey dinner as much as anyone, especially after living off a student's food budget for what seems like a lifetime, I still find Thanksgiving a most unusual day.

For example, Thanksgiving means one must see estranged relatives. Now, if one really wanted to see these people, they wouldn't be estranged. Of course some of these relatives may live out-of-state, in which case they probably wouldn't travel to the "Happy State" just to eat turkey.

After all of these relatives arrive, one must sit around, engaging in disgusting chatter.

And, naturally, there's always that one grandmother who will consistently remind one that she is 10,000 years old, and treats you like you're three-years-old instead of 21.

After all this disgusting chatter has come to a lull, dinner can be served.

As I said before, the meal is always a welcome treat. However, there's always at least one person who over-indulges in food, wine or song. This results in upset tummies—another sickeningly, disgusting aspect of the holiday.

Then there's the leftovers. As if one didn't get enough of the old bird on the holiday, there's plenty more to be relished. After all, one wouldn't want to waste all that delicious food.

What's the point?

Diane Schneidman

So the sandwiches and turkey casseroles pile up over the rest of the week. And mom couldn't get her little darling back to big, bad Eastern with something to eat. Hence, one makes turkey staple meal for a period of about two weeks. By time, Tom himself would be sick of turkey.

Finally, Thanksgiving break is sickeningly short. A good vacation should last for at least two weeks.

One must consider the fact that every project could possibly be postponed until now. Therefore, at least three days of the break will be spent studying.

Thanksgiving day will, no doubt, be spent traveling and eating. Then one must consider one day will be wasted in traveling time and reminiscing. So, never really gets any rest time.

But who am I to complain? In fact, who are we to complain? It could be worse. We might not have a break at all. There might be no such thing as Thanksgiving. There might be no such thing as turkey.

All in all, despite its sickening tenderness, Thanksgiving is a welcome day.

Happy Thanksgiving, and remember, watch out for those relatives and all that homecooking.

Tuesday travel looks wet

By DINO TIBERI
Staff writer

Students preparing Tuesday to travel home for Thanksgiving can expect rain, but it should be a little warmer.

There is a 50 percent chance of showers Tuesday with temperatures expected in the upper 40s or lower 50s, according to The Associated Press.

Richard Wise, Eastern weather and climate instructor, said the average temperature for this time of year in Charleston is just under 50 degrees for the high and around the freezing mark for the low.

For Tuesday, Wise said he looks for present weather conditions to continue, with moderate temperatures and a continued chance of precipitation.

"The 30- and 90-day forecasts called for warmer temperatures and a higher chance of precipitation than normal," Wise said. "It's been a bit warmer than usual, but it's expected to cool down a little bit."

For those traveling north to the Chicago area, temperatures are expected to be five to six degrees lower there than in the Charleston area, Wise said. More precipitation is also expected.

With students going home, Campus Police Chief Tom Larson said Campus Police will be "keeping an eye out on the buildings here on campus, as well as cars left behind."

Although Larson said he doesn't anticipate any real problems with the students' departure, he said, "We don't see any problems at this time, it (weather) is more of a problem at the end of the semester when it snows."

Larson said he doesn't plan to have any extra men on traffic patrol Tuesday.

"Our priority at this time goes from answering calls to more of a security watch," he said. "The officers now have more time to watch the buildings and cars on campus, without being too busy with calls."

Reward for Abbas offered

WASHINGTON (AP)—The United States on Monday offered a reward of $250,000 for information leading to the apprehension, prosecution and punishment of Mohammed Abbas, a Palestine Liberation Organization leader accused of masterminding the hijacking of the Achille Lauro cruise ship on Oct. 7.

State Department Spokesman Charles E. Redman said reward money could also be paid to those with information leading to the arrest and prosecution of others who took part in the hijacking but have not been arrested.

Abbas was in Italian custody briefly after the hijacking, but authorities in Italy permitted him to leave the country even though the United States had sought his extradition. Several other Palestinians are waiting trial in Italy on criminal charges stemming from the seizure of the boat.

Italian prosecutors subsequently acknowledged that Abbas was involved in the capture of the cruise ship in which the crew and passengers were held hostage and one of the 14 Americans aboard, Leon Klinghoffer, was killed.

Weaver vies for second term

By JIM ALLEN
City editor

State Representative Mike Weaver, R-Charleston, recently announced his bid for re-election to the 106th District of the House.

First elected to the House in 1984, the freshman representative quipped, "It seems like you never stop campaigning."

Weaver, an Eastern marketing instructor and former student here, has been instrumental in getting Eastern the closest its ever been to garnering state funding for the physical expansion of the business department.

Weaver also said he is looking forward to querying officials of the Illinois Board of Higher Education in early December to look into why Eastern has remained one of the state's most underfunded four-year schools.

"We've been at the bottom of the barrel for so long, we've got to come up," Weaver said.

Weaver said he received a call from Thomas Layzell, the new chancellor of the Board of Governors, after a story in The Daily Eastern News reported that Weaver said he was going to "investigate" the BOG's effectiveness.

The BOG is the governing body for Eastern, Western Illinois University, Chicago State University, Northeastern Illinois University and Governors State University.

"If nothing else, we've probably got their (the BOG's and the IBHE's) attention," he said.

Another accomplishment Weaver said he had was helping secure $2 million for a literacy program to be run through the state's library system.

The literacy program will be geared toward teaching adults how to read in cooperation with the Secretary of State, the chief librarian for Illinois.

Looking forward to a second term, Weaver said he will work to tackle an expected insurance crisis in the state.

Weaver said he expects the problems to start next year with firms which are either no longer offering certain liability coverage and other firms which are doubling and tripling their rates.

Without placing caps on court awards, Weaver said he believes "there are a number of cases where awards are entirely too much."

He also said the state needs to eliminate double coverage, such as employees who collect on both workmen's compensation and under the Structural Work Act.

"Someone's got to pick up that tab eventually."

Currently Weaver is serving on the inter-related Elementary and Secondary Education, Higher Education and Appropriations II committees. He is also working on the Cities and Villages and Small Business committees, but said he "particularly" wants to remain on the first three.

The 106th District covers all of Coles and Clark Counties, as well as most of Crawford and Edgar Counties.

Markey enjoyed term as speaker

By JULIE ZOOK
Government editor

Likening Student Senate to the function of a wheel, Senate Speaker Larry Markey said he believes the wheel works.

"The speaker is pretty much the base of the wheel, and the senators are the spokes," Markey said. "In order for the wheel to roll, you have to give the individuals responsibility and a great degree of trust."

Markey, a senior, was elected by the senators in May to serve as speaker. Markey will preside over his last meeting on Dec. 11, and graduates at the end of this semester.

A economics/inance double major, Markey said it is unusual for such a major to be involved in senate.

"With my major, you'd never expect me to be speaker. It's usually a political science major," Markey said, although the previous speaker, senior Ron Wesel, is a journalism major.

"I tried to do the best I personally could," Markey said. "I've gotten to know the members of senate and get the politics out of senate."

"If you believe in your own principles, you won't violate them or compromise them."

"You've got to do what you've got to do, and you've got to do it well," Markey said.

Markey said he has tried to run senate as he would "run a business," but he added, "I don't handle little problems. I handle big problems, and that's the way it should be."

"You just pray to God your good days outweigh the bad," Markey said.

Markey said there were several things he wished could have been looked into more fully during his term as speaker.

The Off-Campus Student Housing Association, Markey said, needs to be worked on further. "The off-campus people don't have a voice," he said.

On the recent election turnout, a record low, Markey said he was disappointed, but this year's senate didn't have "the depth it usually has" because of a large turnover in senators.

Markey said that although he does not have a job lined up for after graduation, he would like to work at the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

"College has been great," he said. "This job, I've learned a great deal from."

Study program offered in Ireland

By JENNIFER GAMMAGE
staff writer

The University of Detroit and Oakland University, in conjunction with two Dublin, Ireland, schools, are offering a travel study program in Ireland for all college students.

M.B. Pigott, a sponsor of the study abroad program, said the studies give a rounded picture of Ireland's history, literature and people in the country and city.

The program, titled "Irish Studies in the West," is conducted May 10-June 20 on the west coast of Ireland in County Kerry for five weeks and in Dublin for one week, Pigott said.

The program is set on ocean-front cottages on Dingle Bay and the Ring of Kerry, he said.

During these months a variety of sports are available including swimming, sea and river fishing, wind surfing, kayaking, tennis, horseback riding, bicycling, mountain climbing and jogging.

Students majoring in humanities are encouraged to take advantage of the opportunity, he said.

During the program, Pigott said students can earn three to eight semester credits for a tuition fee of $1950. The fee includes all meals, ground transportation, entrances and theatre tickets. An additional $517 for a round trip flight from Boston is also required.

Pigott said the trip blends the teaching of archeology, music, folklore, geography and art including field trips to Irish cities such as Cork, Dingle, Killarney, Tralee and Dublin.

There are no special requirements for taking the trip and no foreign languages needed, Pigott said noting all classes are taught in English.

Negotiator returns to U.S.

NEW YORK (AP)—Terry Waite, the Anglican church envoy who has been negotiating for the release of four kidnapped Americans in Lebanon, arrived Monday for talks with U.S. officials and relatives of the hostages and said the captives were alive and well.

"The situation is highly volatile," Waite said at a news conference at an Episcopal Church center. "I'm not being overly dramatic when I say one loose word misinterpreted can cost lives—of the hostages or my life."

He said he was "quietly optimistic" about the release of four Americans, but said he knew nothing about the fate of two other American hostages.

The kidnappers have not made any demands, Waite said, adding that he would like to meet with Kuwaiti officials about 17 Moslem prisoners jailed for bombings in Kuwait.

Daugherty and Shick have both said they've considered suing the city for outstanding bills.

The bandshell was nearly completed at its July Fourth dedication, and was fully completed. However, bills for the costs exceeding the Kiwanis contribution remain unpaid.

City Commissioners have all said they only knew of the bandshell construction after it had begun.

Choate said Monday that he had spoken with the council on how he would vote, but added, "I can't say I'll vote with the council. I don't know who it's going to come out.

"We'll see what people want to do. I think a person who would tell you anything else really wouldn't be thinking," Choate said.

Commissioners Wayne Lanman and John Winnett have both said they believe the city is responsible for payment of the bills.

While Winnett could not be reached,

Lanman said, "If we can't come to some agreement with everybody, I'll just make a motion to pay the contractors. They've got a legitimate gripe."

"I don't know where we'd get the money, but we'd have to rake it together somehow," Lanman added. "It's a shame we're in this predicament, but we are."

Scism said he still wants to find out "who said what, what was said and to whom" in regards to the meeting between Oglesby, Choate, Steele and Reed.

"No one disputes the fact that the Kiwanis Club only committed $5,000, so why are they (the contractors) out the $8,000?" Scism said.

But Corbin said he is still not convinced the city should pay for any of the bills.

"I just feel it's not the taxpayers' place to pay for the thing," he said, adding, "I understand that Kiwanis might come up with a compromise."

Bishops' concerns aired

VATICAN CITY (AP)—Roman Catholic bishops assessing the impact of the Second Vatican Council at a special synod are freely airing their views but will not go back on the council's reforms, two leading cardinals reported Monday.

"The council remains valid, completely valid. . . It's impossible to regress, Cardinal Godfried Daneels of Brussels said at a news conference to explain the work of the two-week gathering.

After a ceremonial opening Sunday, 165 participants in the extraordinary synod called by Pope John Paul II heard Daneels sum up how the church has fared in the two turbulent decades since the end of the council, known as Vatican II.

"The implementation of the council reforms exceeded great hopes that many of the members of the council had at that time," Cardinal John Krol of Philadelphia said at the news conference.

"The reality is, even from a juridical standpoint, the synod cannot change, overturn, retrench or amplify the ecumenical council."

Asked repeatedly if a battle was shaping up between conservative and progressive bishops at the synod, Krol replied, "It's not a boxing match we are conducting, it is not a conflict."

Krol is one of three co-presidents of the synod.

Vatican II, held in four sessions between 1962 and 1965, fashioned major changes in Catholic liturgy, ecumenism, seminary education, religious life and church government. The church's image was recast from unchangeable monolith to an institution ready to modernize its structures and ways of teaching.

The two prelates appeared to be seeking to distance the synod leadership from both left and right wings of the church. Two men in particular—Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger, prefect of the Vatican Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, and Bishop James W. Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the U.S. bishops conference—have been seen as leading spokesmen for the conservative and liberal groups, respectively.

Daneels said the synod participants were "struck" by the pontiff's appeal for frank discussion, a gesture he said assured "extremely and completely free" deliberations at the synod.

In his keynote speech to the synod, Daneels summed up the responses the Vatican has received from bishops conferences around the world on the state of their churches.

On the positive side, Daneels identified the changes in the liturgy, dialogue with other denominations, and a continuing commitment to peace, justice and human rights.

Among the negative factors cited by local churches were the difficulties in spreading the church's sexual morality to young people and the inability to effectively deal with secularization, atheism and materialism and indifference caused by "the crisis of moral values" in wealthy countries.

Daneels said the issue of the role of women in the male-dominated church is being given much attention in Western Europe and North America.

Ditka says McMahon will not start until ready

LAKE FOREST, Ill. (AP)—There is only one timetable on quarterback Jim McMahon of the Chicago Bears and that's the one Coach Mike Ditka carries in his mind.

"To play all the time you have to practice all the time," Ditka said Monday, after the undefeated Bears rolled to their 12th straight victory with a 36-0 decision over the Atlanta Falcons.

"Those are the realities," said Ditka, "and until it's proven different to me, that's how it will be."

Steve Fuller, filling for McMahon, directed Sunday's triumph and more than likely will be the starting quarterback next Monday night against the Miami Dolphins.

McMahon has tendinitis in his right throwing shoulder and has been sidelined since the Green Bay game, which was victory No. 9.

Fuller has started the last three games, in which the Bears have outscored the opposition 107-3, including successive shutouts against Dallas and Atlanta.

As for McMahon, Ditka said, "We'll take another look at him Wednesday. If he comes back and practices, it will take three or four days to get back his timing."

Ditka has said all along that when McMahon is ready, "He'll play, he's earned that right. But the team is playing well with Steve."

"The quarterback gets a lot of credit and a lot of blame. He always needs help from other people. Steve came within a hair of having an unbelievable game Sunday. Some balls fell off fingertips, some were overthrown. The opportunities were there."

With Fuller at the controls, the Bears have been a lot more conservative in their approach on offense.

"We're letting him do what he wants to do, what he's comfortable with," Ditka said. "We give him the game plan and let him work it down."

Last year, Fuller started four games after McMahon suffered a kidney injury. Then Fuller re-injured his shoulder and did not return until the playoffs, including a victory over Washington and a loss to San Francisco.

"Last year we didn't have any healthy wide receivers," said Ditka, "we played with three tight ends. We had some success running, but throwing."

The success the Bears are having this season doesn't surprise Ditka.

But, he admitted, "Nobody wants to think they're that good. It's like treading on sacred ground."

Dome ready for Illini prep

URBANA (AP)—Illinois football Coach Mike White said it will be "history in the making" when a huge dome is inflated over Zuppke Field and the Illini prepare to meet Army in the Peach Bowl.

"I think we will be genuinely excited when we step in there to practice football," said White, whose team received the bowl bid Saturday after beating Northwestern.

The plastic bubble, supported by air pressure, will protect the playing surface from ice and snow and allow the team to practice inside Memorial Stadium for post-season games. It is part of a $7 million improvement project at Memorial Stadium.

White said the Illini, who take a 6-4-1 record to Atlanta for the Dec. 31 Peach Bowl, will take this week off before returning to practice. The bubble probable will be in place Dec. 6, he said.

Illinois will face Army, 8-2 entering its regular-season finale against Navy. White said he knew little about Jim Young's team but had talked to him and agreed to exchange films.

"They've had a tremendous resurgence," White said. "They're a fine team. They run the ball well, and they run the wishbone."

White said Army can draw many fans from military bases in the South and said, "Our people better get tickets."

Illinois Athletic Director Neale Stoner said his department put 13,500 tickets to the Peach Bowl on sale Monday, and added, "We need to make sure our community is excited."

He said one thing that made Illinois attractive to the Peach Bowl was that it is relatively close to Atlanta and has a reputation for having fans who will travel to see the Illini play.

McClure selected MVP for '85 cross country season

By JOHN STROUD
Staff writer

Senior Mitch McClure topped off his career as an Eastern cross country runner by being selected as the teams' most valuable player last week.

McClure was chosen by coaches Neil Moore and Tom Akers on a point system based on his performances throughout the season.

McClure was consistently in the top two for Eastern this season and helped pace the team to a third place finish in the Association of Mid-Century Universities' meet. He placed eighth overall with a time of 32:00 in that meet to earn all-conference honors.

Scott Tracy, Brad Conte, Jim Maton and Mike Madix were also honored by their teammates.

Tracy, a senior who missed most of the season due to an injury, was voted by the team as honorary captain for the season while Conte was named outstanding freshman. Maton and Madix were co-winners of the most improved honor.

"Overall I was pretty pleased with the season," assistant coach Akers said. "We had a good group of freshmen to do the job for us. Three different freshmen received votes for outstanding freshman," he added.

"I wish we could have had Tracy this year," Akers continued. "But the team didn't let it get them down which shows a lot of good things about this team."

The harriers will now join the track team in preparation for the indoor opener at home on Dec. 14.

Taylor sparks cagers to 78-62 win

By JEFF LONG
Sports editor

Eastern's new kid on the court brought some old-time savvy with him to Lantz Gym Monday night.

Freshman guard Jay Taylor, playing in only his second collegiate game, came off the bench and ignited the Panthers for a 78-62 non-conference win over William Penn.

Taylor, who serves as the third guard behind starters Doug Crook and Norm Evans, played his relief role perfectly to score 17 points in 23 minutes of playing time—13 of those points coming in an 11-minute span during the first half.

Such a catalyst was Taylor that when he entered the game at 11:06 of the first half, the Panthers were clinging to a shaky 12-11 lead. He played the remainder of the half and when intermission sounded, the Panthers were up 39-22.

"I just come in and try to pick us up," Taylor said, "and make us hustle."

Coach Rick Samuels, who recruited the 6-2 Taylor out of Aurora East, views the freshman's role the same way.

"He can come off the bench and do a lot of things," Samuels said. "He can really ignite us."

The win left the Panthers undefeated at 2-0. They now embark on a three-game road trip beginning with next Monday's contest at the University of Minnesota and do not return home until Dec. 10.

"We've got some ideas on what we want to work on," Samuels said. "We're going to need to tune-up the engine before Minnesota."

At times, Monday's game looked as though it was being played in the sloppiness which was prevalent outside—the Panthers turned the ball over 19 times in a game that looked more like pinball with the bobbled balls and mad scrambles.

"We didn't protect the ball very well," admitted Samuels.

And in the second half, the Panthers didn't protect their 17-point lead very well, either. With Eastern center Kevin Freshman guard Jay Taylor dishes off a pass in traffic Monday night in Eastern's 78-62 win over William Penn at Lantz Gym. Taylor came off the bench to score 17 points.

Duckworth on the bench, William Penn was able to chop Eastern's lead to nine at 53-44 with 10:45 remaining.

But Duckworth, along with forward Jon Collins, held the Statesmen at bay, keeping a 10-point cushion before pulling away in the end.

Collins led all scorers with a quiet 25 points. The preseason All-American was 10 of 16 from the field, with many of his field goals coming on outside jumpers.

Collins now has 45 points in two games for the team scoring lead.

Seven killed in plane carrying Iowa St. harriers

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP)—A twin engine plane carrying members of the Iowa State University women's cross country team crashed and burst into flames in a residential neighborhood Monday evening, killing all seven people aboard and knocking out power to about 1,600 homes, authorities said.

The Aero Commander, one of three planes carrying members of the men's and women's teams and coaching staff from Milwaukee to Ames, crashed in freezing drizzle shortly before 6 p.m. and missed a house by 70 feet, said Sgt. Bill Mullins.

"It's a tragedy, but it could have been three or four times as bad," Mullins said.

Seven bodies were found in the charred wreckage, which lay crumpled at the base of an oak tree on a sloping street, Mullins said.

The victims included four members of the women's team, two male coaches and the pilot, said Polk County Medical Examiner R.C. Wooters. No identities were released.

All the members of the men's cross country team were accounted for, Mullins said.

Bad weather forced the three planes to be diverted from Ames, the site of the university, to Des Moines, and the other two planes landed safely, Mullins said. There were 21 members of the men's and women's teams and coaching staff aboard the three planes, which were owned by the school.

The women's team had finished second behind Wisconsin in the NCAA championship meet at Marquette University.

The Des Moines Municipal Airport control tower said that the pilot of the plane reported "severe vibrations" and that he was climbing to 3,000 feet, according to Ames airport manager H.A. Westbrook.

It was unusual for a pilot to report he was climbing again because the plane was so close to the Des Moines airport, about three miles away, Westbrook said.

Five booters named all-conference

By DOBIE HOLLAND
Staff writer

All-Conference honors were handed out Monday to five members of Eastern's soccer team, coach Cizo Mosnia said.

The Association of Mid-Continent Universities coaches voted Panthers Rick Lansing, Neil Swindells, Ossie Molinari and standout freshman Larry Pretto to the first team all-conference.

Pretto, pipelined from Winona, Canada also was named the AMCU player-of-the-year. And deservedly so, Mosnia said, he (Pretto) led the team in scoring, with nine goals during Eastern's 12-4 season.

Mosnia was also named the coach-of-the-year in the conference.

"I am happy with the honors," Mosnia said. "I am especially happy for Larry also being chosen player-of-the-year. That is quite an achievement for a freshman."

Lansing, from Point Pleasant, New Jersey and Swindells, from Manchester, England capped off their senior years in a presentable fashion. After overcoming early injuries during the year, they contributed leadership on and off the field, Mosnia said.

Both Lansing and Swindells lettered in each season they played for the Panthers.

Meanwhile, the fact that sophomore Molinari received all-conference honors pleased Mosnia as well. Molinari was the team's second leading scorer with seven goals and he also played the role as team motivator; in every game Molinari scored in, the Panthers won all but one.

Mosnia did express disappointment in the fact that two other equally deserving Panthers, sophomore Mark Simpson and senior Paul Kelly were not named to the all-conference team.

Simpson, the brilliant Panther goalkeeper earned eight shutouts this year and he held every team, but Western Illinois, in the AMCU scoreless.

"I am disappointed that Mark wasn't chosen to the team and I thought he really deserved it," Mosnia said. "Maybe an even greater honor will come his way later."

Kelly, played out the remainder of a career that has been hampered by two possible career-ending knee operations and for him only to bounce back and play his usual reliable game is a tribute in itself, Mosnia added.

Guillen named AL rookie-of-year

NEW YORK (AP)—Shortstop Ozzie Guillen, who came to the Chicago White Sox in a trade that sent a Cy Young winner to San Diego, was named the American League Rookie of the Year in voting released Monday by the Baseball Writers' Association of America.

The 21-year-old Guillen, who lives in his native Venezuela, committed just 12 errors in 150 games this past season, the fewest of any regular American League shortstop, while hitting .273.

He came to the White Sox Dec. 10 in the seven-player deal that sent right-handed pitcher LaMarr Hoyt, the 1983 Cy Young award winner, to San Diego along with two minor leaguers for pitcher Tim Lollar, infielder Luis Salazar, Guillen and a minor leaguer.

Guillen (pronounced Geeh-JEN) received 16 of a possible 28 first-place votes—allotted two apiece among BBWAA members in each of the 14 American League cities—for 101 total points.
